

Leuven Meeting Recap - September 10-12

Our on-site gathering in Leuven was as productive as it was inspiring. We kicked things off with a warm Belgian welcome: a cozy dinner hosted by our local partner, setting the tone for three days of focused collaboration.

The first day was dedicated to sharpening the first draft of our Manifesto and the accompanying reports on AI and teacher standards. After a round of spirited proofreading and revisions, a smaller working group polished the text into a version ready for expert review.

Day two brought those experts into the conversation. In mixed breakout groups, they challenged our ideas—debating what to refine, remove, or expand to make the Manifesto both concise and impactful. Their thoughtful feedback sparked lively dialogue and valuable insights.

By the afternoon, we had integrated their recommendations into a second draft, which underwent yet another thorough review. Through collective effort and careful debate, the final version of the Manifesto will be finalized by the end of September - ready to be read by all of you.
